Championship juniors Alpine Ski – Passo San Pellegrino

CURRENT CONDITIONS A High pressure ridge strengthening over central-Northern Europe drives stronger and stronger Northerly winds to the Alps between Friday and Saturday. Today and tomorrow a deep Low pressure moving from the Balkans to South of Italy will bring colder air masses, but on the Dolomites the further strengthening of the High pressure will keep warmer temperature aloft. From Sunday the further strengthening of the Atlantic High ridge will bring again settled and sunny weather, newly rather mild everywhere.

Sea surface chart h 12 GMT Saturday 23

Today Mostly sunny weather with mainly clear sky after some cumulus in the morning. Still dry air with very good visibility everywhere. Slightly chilly climate aloft with fresh/strong winds from Northwest.
